To Whom it may concern,

I want to exspress a note of PRFOUND THANKS for extending the comment period - so that, I too might voice my feelings.

I will share how crutial I feel, that a place be set apart from the homogenity that is taking root in the "so termed", wild, open spaces. There seems to be a 'Disny-fication of EVERY WILD SPOT ON THE MAP!!!

I'll tell you that I rode my bicycle from Salt Lake City, Ut. many years ago, whilst en-route to Colorado, and the blissful hours spent FREE OF TRAFFIC. This would be not possible when Coal Mining transpired, as is looming in the future does indeed appear bleak.

I do NOT want to see UTAH's spectacolar wilderness fall beneath Society's "WHEELS". There is NOT A similar place like Utah's land, or as easily accessible - TO AMERICANS. (or anyone else)

PLEASE DO NOT CHOP UP THE UTE'S - NATIVE INHABITANTS - LAND, FOR OUR GREED!
