BOYER MINE BEING RECLAIMED

The Boyer Coal Mine on Chalk Creek Road near Upton, Utah, has been inoperative for more than five years. Now contractors are reclaiming the site--eliminating the structures and contouring the area to look as though no mine existed there.

The work consists of dismantling the structures, removing the debris, site grading and earthwork, constructing a drainage ditch and replanting native vegetation.

VCM Construction of Kamas, Utah was awarded the project by the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Program of the Utah Division of Oil, Gas and Mining. Funds to pay for the work come from a reclamation bond posted by the mine's former operators. The cost of the project is $94,150.

Work began November 3, 1994, and will be completed by mid December if the weather permits.
