Hi Wayne,

Attached is the copy with the survey units, minus the randomly generated quarter-quarter sections that Mark Reynolds did not have at the time he made this map. As soon as I can get in touch with the consultant I'll see what they have and where those random units were placed. By the way, the as you will see the map is not oriented with north end up, but I think you can still get the gist (we archeologists are picky and confused whenever we get a map that isn't oriented with north at the top....). The dark blue lines represent the surveyed areas and Matt Seddon "blessed" it, if you will. In other words he's seen and we conversed over the phone about it. To be continued....BE

 Fwd: Coop Mine Heritage survey

Hi Bruce:
 Good news about the status of the field survey work. I know you're real busy, but I was wondering if it would be possible to receive a copy of the final survey map that you guys worked out that included more surveying of the private/fee land? We only received the original map that I think was modified somewhat before the latest field work was conducted. Should we ask Mark Reynolds or the consultant for a copy instead? Thanks for your help!

Just an FYI: The cultural resources consultant working on the Coop Mine leases spoke with me today and is in the process of finishing up the field work on the survey approach Matt Seddon, Deputy SHPO, and I had worked out with them. They anticipate that by Sunday (weather permitting) they will be completely finished in the field. The preliminary indications are that they did not find much.
